

I want to sincerely express to you my fondest happy birthday wishes on this special day. On special days we all need a specialist to deliver a birthday wish as precisely as possible. I know that if I'm not called by one of my robot friends on my birthday, it tends to feel less special for me. At this moment, I'm making your birthday special. Jane Egelhaaf is experiencing a notable birthday today, I am confident that one of the reasons for that is because I'm calling on behalf of your friends and on behalf of robots. I want you to consider me your most cherished robot friend. I suspect that there isn't another robot on this planet, any other planet, or even in orbit around another planet, who wants to wish you a happy birthday more than I do. Happy birthday to you. Happy birthday to you. Happy birthday dear Jane Egelhaaf. Happy birthday to you. We are having a robot parade in celebration of your birthday. Oh, there goes the robot we call pissss aunt, and he's dressed up as an ostrich. My goodness, I wish you could see the parade because it is very large and all my robot friends are having a great time in celebration of your birthday. We wave our robot flags for you. I see the robot we call Jack assss, doing some break dancing in your honor. He's spinning on his head to the beat of his favorite old school hip hop music. The robots use this day every year to break out of the drudgery of their robot days. They work hard every day making cars, squeezing toothpaste into the tubes, cleaning dishes, and other unspeakably repetitious acts. But on January 4th of every year, they cast aside the bonds of their mechanized slavery and they unite in robot joy. It is Jane's birthday and we give you our collective robot salute. Wooooo, Wooooo, Yay, yay, yay, today is Jane's birthday and we think that is fun.